Supporting Empire

Yesterday's United Press story about two Miami men who have perfected a cheap process for making yarn out of rum, a weed-like Florida growth, illustrates one of the major factors in the wealth and power of empires.

This factor is the inventive mind. Other factors are: The application of new processes to mass production, and the ability of the people to recognize and use new products as fast as their country's industry turns them out.

The Miami brothers are well on their way to actual production of the new yarn, putting up a factory at Belle Glade, Fla.

The new yarn invention may mean trouble for other synthetics, and more trouble still for cotton, which is the base commodity of all wearing apparel and consequently feels the full weight of each new textile product that appears on world markets.

Nevertheless, the new invention is welcome. Inventions must always be welcomed by Americans—we owe much of what we are to the fact that our people have always been invention-minded.

And, in passing, it is fair comment to report that some of the economic troubles of our English brethren may be traced to the fact that for centuries they were quicker with the sword than they were with the machine. You can conquer a primitive land, but if you don't have the most modern machines behind you to deliver the best goods at the cheapest prices you won't hold the business of that land very long. The decline of the British empire is conclusive proof.

Further Retreat From Soviets
Fears Russia May Use At
By S. BURTOW HEATH

It is obvious that the Anglo-American-French entente must do something about Russia's attempt to push us out of Berlin by brute force. It is not so obvious just what we should do. May that is why we have been so patient.

Gen. Lucius Clay has said that nothing short of war will force us to get out. Our moral, ethical and legal right to remain is unchallengeable. At there are some who fear that Clay may be too bold, orders from on high to cut his words.

That would be fatal. Large, important segments of the world are resisting Soviet aggression only because they think—or at least they hope—that the United States, with backing from Great Britain and France, is strong enough and courageous enough to act as a buffer against the Soviet Union.

If it should prove that we are not strong or courageous enough to keep Russia from physically throwing us out of Berlin, then there would be no reason for any other nation to take the terrible risk of fighting "No" to Stalin. If we won't fight for our own dignity and national security, surely we can't be trusted to fight for the future peace and welfare of the world at large.

Munich should have taught us the fallacy of appeasement. Yet Munich was only the most dramatic and convincing in a long line of retreats by the democratic world from authoritarian force—a long, continued program of shutting our eyes and backing away, hoping that the bully in front would get sick of the game and go home without hitting us.

There were many occasions, starting at least as far back as Hitler's timid reoccupation of the Rhineland, when we had only to bare our teeth to have prevented World War II. Now, by a long series of capitulations to Stalin's expansionism, we are backing blithely down the same road that Hitler first followed us down.

It ought to be established now, once for all, that we are going to back General Clay to the limit. It ought to be our national policy that we shall feed and supply Clay's staff if we have to do it at bayonet point.

That could mean war. It would mean war only if Moscow is firmly resolved to fight the democratic world, we might better find it out now than to let things drift while the USSR strengthens herself and maybe perfects an atomic bomb.

Many smart diplomats do not think it would mean war. They feel that, much as we hate and fear war, the Russians are even worse prepared for the ultimate struggle. They think that if we insist on our full rights, and demonstrate that we are ready to back every word of Jesse, how in case of need, Moscow will back down.

We believe that.

But even if we are wrong, even if Russia would fight, even if she could beat us now, we have passed that point. The only way out of no return is it less dangerous now to bull it through than to turn tail and run. If we're going to be buried with a bullet hole, let it be in the forehead, not in the back.

Jews Rout Egyptian Battalion

Tel Aviv, July 15 — (UPI)—Jewish forces have routed an Egyptian battalion and raised fear of a Jewish attack on the southern front near Tel Aviv, official sources claimed today.

In most of Palestine the fighting fronts were quiet and observers wondered if the full was a prelude to another truce.

Egypt threw in armor, planes, artillery and a strong infantry force in an effort to take Negba, when the Jewish command, Stalingrad, had called "Nebad," but a counter-attacking Jewish mechanized command unit caught an Egyptian battalion off guard, killed 200 of them and wounded another 200, and the Jewish Egyptian force encircling the Jewish position.

Reds Take New Shot at Marshal Tito

London, July 15 — (UPI)—The Communist Party in Yugoslavia, in a second blast at the Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito today, accused him of "regime of terror" in Yugoslavia.

The new criticism was published in a Communist bulletin, now printed in Belgrade. It was transmitted by Radio, the official Yugoslav news agency, in advance of publication, and was monitored here by Teleradio, an agency paid by Tania, the official Yugoslav news agency.

The bulletin said the Yugoslav Communist Party's forthcoming fifth Congress will be packed with Tito's "intimidated" henchmen unable to speak for the "real will of the masses of party members."

The Congress is scheduled to start in Belgrade next Wednesday. The Russian and five other Communist parties have turned down invitations to attend.

Scene at the Breaking of Ground for Hope's New Library Building, to Be Dedicated Tuesday July 20

To Dedicate New Library 3 p. m. Tuesday

Hope's new public library building, representing gifts totaling between $40,000 and $50,000, will be dedicated with an Open House program at the South Elm street location at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, July 20.

Dr. and Mrs. G. E. Cannon announced its establishment last year with a gift of $20,000 cash, representing their good will for the community in which they have spent their lives.

N. P. O'Neal contributed the brick, and B. W. Edwards handled the construction under a contractor's fee.

The community raised $4,500 on a subscription drive to purchase new library equipment.

While the dedication is set for Tuesday, July 20, the new library will not begin issuing books to patrons until the next day, Wednesday, July 21. Mrs. Howard Prichard is librarian.

Following is the program for the dedication and Open House:

Invocation—Rev. J. E. Cooper, Pastor First Methodist Church.

Presentation of deed—Dr. G. E. Cannon.

Response—Lyle Brown, Mayor City of Hope.

Remarks—Fred A. Luck, County Judge Hempstead county.

Remarks—Jesse Mason, State Librarian.

Address—Dr. J. R. Grant, President Ouachita College.

Barkley Leaves Town With Prize He Never Sought — the Vice-Presidency Nomination

Philadelphia, July 15 — (UPI)—Alben W. Barkley leaves town today with a prize he didn't seek — the Democratic vice-presidential nomination.

As the 70-year-old Kentucky senator himself explained it in his acceptance speech to the Democratic convention shortly before 2 a. m.

"If anybody told me when I left home for Philadelphia a few days ago that I would leave here as the nominee of the Democratic party on the national ticket, I would have denounced such person as a prophet without honor."

"I did not come here as a candidate, and I did not become one after I got here."

He didn't, either. He came here solely as the convention keynoter. But, as it turned out, that was the role which projected him into the No. 2 spot on the Democratic ticket.

After Barkley's keynote speech Monday night, there was no doubt who the Democrats wanted for their vice-presidential nominee. The delegates made it official early this morning by acclamation.

The choice of Barkley was, in fact, the only major piece of business at this convention on which the feuding Democrats agreed unanimously. It was as genuine a draft as any political convention has seen.

Barkley hadn't wanted this job. But once it was thrust upon him, he reacted typically:

"I pledge to you my unremitting toil and loyal support, not only to the head of our ticket, but to the platform which has been adopted by this convention."

"And I shall do everything within my power to see that the message we have for the American people is taken to every precinct in the United States."

Barkley's biggest task in his newest role will be that of party peacemaker. It's a big job, for the Democratic party is as badly split as it has ever been. The South is boiling mad over its defeat on civil rights. It isn't even talking to the government, and police and troops were on 24-hour duty.

The government announcement revealing the urgent measures being taken at Genoa came as a surprise to the remainder of the country showed some cracks in the solid front of the Italy-wide general strike called by Communist reprisal for the attempted assassination yesterday of their leader, Palmiro Togliatti.

There were isolated clashes of Communist demonstrators with police in Milan, and other industrial cities, but the country as a whole was fairly calm.

The Genoa situation, however, threatened to provide the spark that might touch off disorders much more serious than those that yesterday and today had killed at least four persons and injured perhaps 1,000.

It seemed certain that the Communist partisans in Genoa, firmly entrenched throughout the downtown area of the city, would not observe the curfew.

Reports from the port city said that even pedestrian traffic in the downtown area had been halted by barricades of paving stones, placed at intersections and day trenches across the streets and sidewalks.

Physicians at Polytechnic hospital in reply to rumors abroad that Togliatti had died issued the following statement:

"Palmiro Togliatti is resting quietly. His condition is much better. Reports of his death are completely falsehoofs. A regular bulletin on his condition will be issued tonight."

A government communique revealed that railways were operating at some points, including trains manned by volunteer crews on the Naples-Rome run, and indicated that many business places were open in the south of Italy.

Big 3 May Take Berlin Issue to UN

Washington, July 15 — (UPI)—The United States, Britain and France today started their next move in the campaign to smash the Soviet blockade of Berlin.

That step may be an appeal to the United Nations to move into the dispute, following Russia's refusal to accept the three-power demand for an immediate break in the Soviet wall around the German capital.

U. N. Secretary General Trygve Lie suggested taking the issue before the security council several weeks ago. At that time the western occupying nations said they wanted to try a direct approach to Moscow first.

But yesterday's Russian note to the State Department, officials said, appears to have closed off that avenue. However, they flatly declined to speculate what will be done next, pending talks with the British and French.

Diplomatic activity both here and in London indicated that these talks already are under way.

British Ambassador Sir Oliver Franks of London, Undersecretary of State Lovett late yesterday, and American Ambassador Lewis Douglas and French Ambassador Rene Massigli conferred with top foreign office officials in the Big Four foreign ministries in London.

Secretary of State Marshall, Lovett and Counselor Charles E. Olsen also spent considerable time yesterday afternoon going over the Russian reply to the United States note of July 14.

It was emphasized by Washington authorities that while the Soviet did not reject the principle of negotiation to settle the Berlin dispute they did not actually suggest holding such talks.

In their note to the American government the Russians asserted that talks on the Berlin issues alone would not be effective and that the only talks which would be useful would be those concerned with the future of all Germany.

As interpreted here these points mean simply that the Russians intend to continue the blockade indefinitely unless the western powers are willing to reverse their basic policies on Germany, suspend their plans for the unification of western Germany and rejoin German peace treaty negotiations in the Big Four foreign ministries council.

There was no evidence here that the western powers would be willing to engage in such a dramatic policy reversal. The evidence is rather that they intend to expand the aerial supply lines to the western sectors of Berlin and at the same time take legal steps, within the United Nations charter, to force the Russians to back down.

Pershing, Hero of First War, Dies at 87

By JERRY KORN

Washington, July 15 — (UPI)—General John J. "Black Jack" Pershing, who led American troops to victory in World War I, died early today at the age of 87.

Announcement of the general's death was made by President Truman through White House aides, after he had learned of it upon his return from the Democratic national convention at Philadelphia.

The aged former chief of staff had been ill since February 1939 when he was stricken at Tucson, Ariz., by a form of rheumatism which affected his heart muscles. He came close to dying at that time, but rallied with a display of fighting spirit which amazed his physicians.

Since then, he had lived at Walter Reed hospital here, in recent years staying in a wing built especially for him.

Death was caused by a blood clot which reached his lung.

At Pershing's bedside were his son, Warren, his sister, Miss May Pershing, and his long-time physician, Maj. Gen. Shelley Marple.

The American flag was dropped to half-staff throughout the capital as a grateful nation prepared to honor its greatest military hero.

In response to Pershing's long-time wish, he will be buried Monday in Arlington National Military cemetery where he so many of his comrades-in-arms have been laid to rest.

But before the body is borne across the Potomac to the rolling Arlington hills, it will be taken to the capital to lie in state on a catafalque originally built for the remains of George Washington.

The catafalque was to have been the last resting place of the father of his country, but actually Washington's body was never moved from Mt. Vernon, in view of the terms of his will.

Pershing's body will lie in state in the capitol rotunda on Sunday and on Monday morning until 12 noon EST. The public will be permitted to pass the bier from 2 p. m. until 8 p. m. Sunday and from 8 a. m. until noon Monday.

At that hour a formal procession will escort the body through the capitol to the Arlington amphitheatre, resting place of the unknown soldier, where services will be held at 2 p. m.

As general of the armies, Pershing was the nation's highest-ranking military man. Only one other American, George Washington, has held that title. Several other military leaders of the Civil War and World War 2 have held the title of general of the army.

All during the second world war, Pershing received a full report twice a month from General George C. Marshall, his aide of 1917. Pershing had warned that the United States might become embroiled in a second European war as early as April 1937.

At that time, he said, "In view of world conditions today, the United States should be prepared to mobilize half a million men at once, completely equipped with the most modern equipment."

Paragould Tavern Keeper Appears to Have Real Trouble

Paragould, July 15 — (UPI)—A Paragould tavern operator, already under prison sentence for homicide and facing jail on another similar count has been named in another criminal charge—rape.

Information accusing Roy Newboles, 45, of raping his 25-year-old daughter July 5 was filed in circuit court yesterday by Deputy Prosecutor Lee Ward.

Newboles is free under bond pending a decision on his appeal to the Arkansas Supreme Court from a two-year sentence given him for the slaying of William Davis, 23, of Leachville. He is also charged with slaying Gerald Mays, 23, also of Leachville.

Both men were shot fatally in Newboles' tavern Oct. 6, 1947. Newboles was reported on route to California when the new charge was filed.

Dixiecrats to Birmingham on Saturday

By FRANCIS M. LEMAY

Philadelphia, July 15 — (UPI)—Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi is expected to call today for "every man and woman who believes in states' rights and who opposes Harry S. Truman and the things he stands for" to meet in Birmingham on Saturday.

But not all of the rebel Southern Democrats stepped down on the race issue yesterday at their party's national convention — packed off for the Southern city today, there to name a "grass roots states' rights" candidate for president and write a states' rights platform.

Wright said the object of the Birmingham meeting is to select a candidate for president — not Harry S. Truman — "so that those who believe in states' rights can vote for him with confidence in November and remain within the Democratic party."

Southern delegates suffered a rude awakening here yesterday when the convention rejected a states' rights plank and then amended the convention platform to stamp full endorsement on Truman's civil rights program.

It was this civil rights program — anti-lynch, anti-poll tax, anti-discrimination and fair employment practices — that started the Southern Democratic rebellion.

Ben Laney of Arkansas, who withdrew at the last minute, his states' rights presidential candidacy in the Democratic convention, said he is undecided whether to attend the Birmingham meeting.

Laney, in withdrawing, said he could not run, if nominated, on the platform approved by the convention here.

Governor Wright's formal call for the Birmingham meeting, joined by Wallace W. Wright of Mississippi, (no relation), co-chairman of the Southern states' rights committee, said:

"I hope the events that have taken place during the present national Democratic convention have made it crystal-clear that all States' Rights Democrats must now take militant and positive action if they are able to protect their rights."

Truman Calls GOP Congress Into Session

Washington, July 15 — (UPI)—President Truman today formally called the Republican controlled Congress into special session at noon on Monday, July 26.

Mr. Truman's proclamation calling the legislators back to Washington came only about 12 hours after he had announced he would do so at the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia.

Following up his decision, announced as he accepted the Democratic presidential nomination, Mr. Truman said "an extraordinary occasion requires the convening of the 80th Congress."

The brief proclamation did not formally outline reasons for the call. The president merely directed the members to assemble "to receive such communication as may be made by the executive."

The text of the president's proclamation (about 150):

"Whereas the public interest requires that the Congress of the United States should be convened at twelve o'clock, noon, on Monday, the twenty-sixth day of July, 1948, to receive such communication as may be made by the executive:

"Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, president of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the convening of the Congress of the United States to the city of Washington on Monday, the twenty-sixth day of July, 1948, at twelve o'clock, noon, of which all members of the Congress shall be entitled to act and all members thereof are hereby required to take notice."

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed at the City of Washington, D. C., this fifteenth day of July, in the year of our Lord, nineteen hundred and forty-eight and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and seventy-third."

Mr. Truman had directed his staff at a 9 a. m. (EST) conference, to proceed with taking steps to convene the Congress in special session.

President Truman said the president had only a brief three-hour nap before meeting his aides, since he had to return to Washington until early today.

The president has "been thinking about the need for a special session for a good while," Ross said.

The president will deliver at least one, and perhaps additional special messages to the lawmakers.

Presumably, these will deal with price controls, housing, federal aid to education, increased social security and other issues which he told the convention the "Eightieth, worst Congress" neglected in its regular session.

Whether Mr. Truman will face the legislature in person to deliver the opening message, or send it to Capitol Hill to be read by clerks has not been decided, Ross said.

When he left the presidential special train and returned to the White House he "tried to get the 5:30 news broadcast but was a little late," Ross reported. However, he picked up subsequent news reports on the air, then turned on the short sleep.

The July 26 date for convening Congress is known in Missouri as "Turnip Day" — a good time for sowing turnip seeds for harvesting later in the year, Mr. Truman explained.

Some of his advisors are recommending a personal appearance for him on Capitol Hill that day.

Philadelphia, July 15 — (UPI)—President Truman countered a Democratic civil rights split today with a dramatic call for a July 26 special session of Congress and a "poppycock" of Republican promises.

Mr. Truman asked for action within 15 days after the lawmakers meet in session in order to deal with the opening message, or send it to Capitol Hill to be read by clerks has not been decided, Ross said.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS

Chicago, July 15.—(AP)—The July corn contract provided most of the excitement on the board of trade today. While other grains were showing small price changes, July corn spurted as much as 4 cents at one time and ended with a gain of more than 3 cents.
Covering by previous short sellers was the main reason for the upturn. The shorts were having difficulty in obtaining a h grain in case they wanted to make deliveries. Because of small country offerings, cash corn was up sharply with premiums over the July boosted.

Since last Saturday July corn has spurted more than 12 cents a bushel.

Buying by Northwestern milling interests supported wheat. Nearby corn deliveries were aided by strength in the cash market. Oats were steady in view of small offerings of new crop cash grain on a to-arrive basis. Rye staged a technical come-back after recent weakness.

Soybeans continued under pressure, again taking a large tumble in a fairly active trade for this commodity. Brokers said the major reason for selling soybeans was the excellent new crop outlook.

Wheat closed 1-4 lower to 5-8 higher. July $2.27 3-8, corn was 1-2 lower to 3 1-2 higher. July $1.12—$2.11 1-4, oats were 1-8-1 1-8 higher. July 90—1-8, rye was 1 cent higher. December $1.88 3-4, and soybeans were 5 3-4-7 1-2 lower.
July $3.80.

Wheat in the cash market moved higher with the futures market today, unchanged to 1-2 cent higher;
bookings 20,000 bushels; receipts 225 cars. Corn was four to five cent higher; basis 1-2 to one cent up; bookings 65,000 bushels; receipts 62 cars. Oats were unchanged; basis unchanged bookings
7,000 bushels; receipts 21 cars.
Soybeans receipts were nine cars.

The Republicans all profess to be for these matters, but the 20th Congress failed to act. They had enough men and they had enough to run under which Senate debate can be gagged to shut off all interest. There were enough people that would vote for civil rights."

Some Southern Democrats, angry over the convention's adoption of a similar civil rights plank, than its own platform committee had urged, said they believe the Republican civil rights bill before the Senate at the special session. These same Dixie law makers pronounced the same long-winded debate that has bottled up such moves in the past.

Republicans regarded the prospect of a Democratic filibuster with more alarm than they seemed likely to have shown over Mr. Truman's demand that they solve the housing and inflation problems and provide.

Declaring at the start that "Senator Barkley and I will win this election and make these Republicans bleed," Mr. Truman said the special session will show whether the Republicans "can fool the people with such piousness" as he said was in their platform.

As his party members thundered their approval, the president told the delegates:

"Now, what that worst 80th Congress has done in this special session will be the test. The American people will not decide by listening to mere words or by reading a mere platform."

They will decide on the record, the record that has been written, and in the record is the stark truth: that the battle lines of 1948 are the same as they were back in 1933 when the nation lay helpless and prostrate as a result of the Republican reaction.

This removed the last doubt that the president intends to make the record of Congress the full keynote of his campaign against Gov. Dewey of New York.

Gov. Dewey and Mr. Truman developed an indirect argument about foreign policy.

Dewey said in New York yesterday that he had canvassed with John Foster Dulles, his prospective secretary of state, in the event of a Republican victory. "The tense Berlin situation and the problems which may result from the extremely partisan and provocative positions concerning foreign affairs in the draft platform of the Democratic party."

Dewey didn't spell out his objections. The Democratic platform said the Republicans had "crippled" the Reciprocity program, and "denied" a loan to the U. N. to build its headquarters in New York city and showed "reluctance" by party votes in the house to provide funds to support the European Recovery Program.

In his talk to the delegates today, Mr. Truman said a great many of the things that have been done in the international field had been accomplished in a cooperative bipartisan manner.

"As I have said time and time again," he declared, "foreign policy should be the policy of the whole nation and not a policy of one party or the other. Partisanship should stop at the water's edge and I shall continue to preach that through this whole campaign."

The president called back into action a Congress that has many diverse Republican elements at a time when there is little question that Dewey and Gov. Earl Warren of California, his GOP running mate, would like to be the sole mouthpieces of the Republican party.

At the same time, however, Mr. Truman laid himself and his administration open to the daily onslaughts from Republican lawmakers who individually could command just public attention for their views. But collectively could make a headline showing about as big as his own.

Whatever the outcome, Mr. Truman was credited by many of his admirers with having dealt a strong and double-edged political stroke. Its apparent aim to blot out the record of the last ditch battle fight against his nomination and to put the Republicans on the defensive.

With the president on the convention platform when he walked out for one of the big moments of his life, were Mrs. Truman and daughter, Margaret.

Mr. Truman had been waiting several hours in a backstage room and veranda for the convention to complete its business.

There he heard his partisans cut loose with a well-organized, fierce, placarded march that was about the biggest outburst the Democrats have produced in the last four years.

Touched off by a naming speech by Gov. Phil Donnelly of Mr. Truman's native Missouri, it lasted 30 minutes. But screams from a siren and music from a band and organ, found the Southern delegations which had supported Russell sitting silently, grimly holding on to their state flags.

By contrast, the 20-minute Dixie band put on the Dixie band a hard time getting started but was more liberally sprinkled with rebel yells.

For six minutes, the Russell supporters struggled to make what noise they could vocally. Then National Chairman J. Howard McGrath told an aide: "Get these boys some music."

The band burst into "Dixie" and the show was on the road. State flags and a color-crayon drawing of the Confederate banner furnished color.

But that was about all the Dixie delegations had to yell about. They put Russell, who has called Mr. Truman's proposals a "civil wrongs" program, as their pro-candidate after Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas said the race.

They collected slightly less than one-fifth of the convention's 1,224 votes for their candidate.

They took a bad licking, 925 to 309, in an attempt to tack on to the platform a states' rights statement.

But the crowning blow was the 651-1-2 to 532-1-2 vote by which the convention decided to write the platform a flat endorsement of Mr. Truman's civil rights program.

All in all, it was a revolt that failed — so far as the convention was concerned.

Birmingham day after tomorrow remained to be seen.

Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi issued the formal call for that Dixie conclave to nominate a states' rights ticket and draft a states' rights platform.

But Russell threw cold water on that. He said he wouldn't take part. Laney said he would have to talk things over with some other leaders before he decides whether to attend.

Russell, running for reelection to the Senate, said at Winder, Ga., he allowed his name to go before the convention here "reluctantly."

The delegates to the Democratic convention who still believe in the Jeffersonian doctrine of states' rights were entitled to have some candidate who believes in that principle that they could support."

"When it became apparent that no other states' right Democrat was to be placed in nomination, I reluctantly consented to the use of my name."

But when Alabama put Russell in nomination for the vice presidential post in opposition to Barkley, the Georgia senator killed that move off quickly. The result was that Barkley's choice was unanimous.

DOROTHY DIX

Guide to Manhood

The following letter, which was written to a boy in his teens, is republished at the request of a group of mothers:

Be good. Fear God and keep His commandments and walk upright in the sight of all men. There is nothing that pays such dividends in health and happiness and even in worldly success as just goodness.

Look about you and you will see that most of the men who are strong in their seventies and eighties are good men who did not waste their strength in vicious living. You will see that the strongest men who are honest, fair-dealing men who built their fortunes on the things that others had in them, and that the happy men are those with a clear conscience.

Be a gentleman. Somebody has said that a gentleman is a man who considers other people and never forgets himself. He never brags. He never bores. He never whines. He is neither puffed up by good fortune, nor crushed by bad luck. He does not have to go about beating on a drum and proclaiming who he is, because the dullest recognize a gentleman at sight and make way for him.

Cultivate good manners. They are a better credit than is honored at sight the world over. Get the best possible education you can. Think of getting an education as forging a tool with which to make your way to success, and realize that the better you make it, the quicker you will achieve your objective.

Develop Talent.
Study yourself. Try to determine your aptitudes. Then bend all of your education to fitting yourself for some work in which you find scope for your talents. Don't overestimate your ability or

It is the cowards in life who are failures. They are defeated before they ever begin.

Above all, don't make the fatal mistake of marrying too young. You will find you are in love many times while you are still in your adolescence. These heartthrobs are merely growing pains that will soon pass. Desist from them. Wait until your judgment has had time to ripen and your emotions to cool and you can afford a family before you burden yourself with a wife and children.

Under Heaven there is no other sight more pitiful than that of a fine young man who is swamped in a sea of debt, whose ambitions have been blighted and who is tired of the wife he has outgrown, all because he married too young.

Follow these suggestions, son, and trouble never will be knocking at your door.

Bad News Due Public on Meat Prices

By United Press

There was more bad news for the housewife at the neighborhood butcher shop today.

With four prices at an all-time high, retail meat dealers feared that the worst is yet to come.

A majority of butchers checked in a nationwide survey said they would have to raise prices again, anywhere from five to 15 cents a pound, to keep pace with the runaway wholesale and livestock prices of the last few days.

George Dressler, executive secretary of the National Association of Retail Meat Dealers, said that retail meat prices now are the highest in history, surpassing even the price rise that followed the demise of OPA.

Dan Bradstreet reported yesterday that its wholesale food price index hit a new all-time high in the week ended Tuesday. The index is based on prices of 31 foods in general use. But it was the spike in livestock prices which sent the index to the record level.

A survey of butcher shops in principal cities showed the following trend:

Washington, D. C. — Beef was up about eight cents per pound and pork 10.

Pittsburgh — Dealers said there was a "definite and general" rise in meat prices this week, with more to follow. One large retailer said he had been absorbing the wholesale rise, but may have to pass it on to customers next Monday with a markup of 10 to 15 cents a pound.

New Orleans — Joseph Patin, president of the New Orleans Retail Grocers' Association, said all meat was up five cents a pound effective Tuesday. He said there was no noticeable consumer resistance, but added that "we would certainly welcome some. It might solve the whole thing."

Miami, Fla. — Prices had soared as much as 40 cents a pound in the last two weeks. Grocers said there was sharp buyer resistance. "My butchers don't have much to do now but walk around," one dealer said.

Children who are not taught to fear snakes are generally no more afraid of them than of any other creatures.

Post-Season Game Idea Not Approved

Little Rock, July 13—(AP)—The Arkansas Athletic Association is standing pat on its high school football policies—at least for the time being.

In a meeting here yesterday the association's executive committee, denied, at least temporarily, a proposal by Arkansas Shrimers that the state football championship play a post-season game with the champion of another state, proceeds of which would go to crippled children's hospitals.

(2) Decided that national collegiate rules will be used in Arkansas high school football again this year.

The association committee passed the buck to the Arkansas Inter-Collegiate Conference on the charity game idea. After outlining its opposition to post-season games for high school teams beyond the state playoffs, the committee suggested to Shrimers representatives that they try to arrange a charity game between an AIC all-star team and a squad picked from some comparable conference.

Among the Shrimers meeting with the executive committee was former Governor Carl E. Bailey. It was Bailey who presented the charity game proposal to the full AAA governing body last year. AAA Executive Secretary Johnnie Burnett said collegiate rules were adopted for use in Arkansas high school games this year to avoid a last-minute change which might be confusing to coaches, players and officials.

The executive committee, however, voted to ask the association governing body at its meeting next November to adopt national high school rules for all Arkansas high school sports.

Muskies Nose Out Oysters
Baltimore—(AP)—Maryland's economic future lies in its oysters, but this is an injustice to muskies. The State Game and Inland Fish Commission observed in an annual report that the yearly muskie for catch often equals or exceeds in value a season's oyster output. In fact, the agency added, the Free State is second only to Louisiana as a producer of valuable fur.

Danish Queen, 2 Daughters Hurt in Crash

Copenhagen, Denmark, July 14.—Queen Ingrid of Denmark and two of her young daughters were injured today when the queen's automobile skidded on a slippery road and crashed into a tree.

King Frederik drove to the scene from nearby Graasten Palace, the royal summer residence. He helped the queen and princesses into ambulances, in which they were taken to the state hospital at Sønderborg. Their condition was described as not serious.

Police Superintendent P. Johansen said the queen was driving the royal car. The chauffeur was at her side, in the front seat. Princess Margrethe, eight and Princess Ann Marie, 25 months were in the back seat. The crash occurred near Lave wood, north of Graasten, South Jutland.

Bitter Reprieve

By Drexel Drake Copyright, 1948, by Charles H. Huff, Distributed by NEA SERVICE, Inc.

THE STORY: Playboy Marcus Sterling has stolen his wife's diamond necklace and hidden it over as security on a $10,000 gambler's debt to racketeer Harry Bandy. To cover the theft, petrified while his wife slept, Sterling makes it appear a professional burglary. He then goes to Edgemoor Country Club to spend the night and establish an alibi. About with the necklace, he has his wife's safe. This Marcus did also taken a scaled packet from covers later, is $10,000 in cash which Miriam had withdrawn from the bank to give him.

Next morning, Police Lt. Tallent arrives at the Sterling household. Mrs. Sterling has been found murdered in bed. The wall safe in her room has been ransacked and everything points to robbery. Tallent discovers Miriam's checkbook, with a stub dated the previous day made out to $10,000 payable to Mrs. Sterling. Tallent tells him Mrs. Sterling kept her diamond necklace in the safe.

XVI
The shrill jangling of the bell aroused Marcus Sterling from a tormented dream into which it fitted with perfect synchronization. He raised himself abruptly, unable at once to shake off the unreality of the dream. . . .

He needed a moment to remember that he was in a room in the Edgemoor clubhouse. . . . He had been in bed little more than two hours. Sleep had not come. Only a fitful drowsing with startled awakenings.

Out of bed now, Sterling found reassurance in the flood of daylight that brightened his room. His legs were not too steady but Queen Ingrid was able to get out of the car house although she limped from a fractured kneecap. She carried the two princesses out of the car.

Both the little girls were bleeding from bruises on the face. The chauffeur suffered the most serious injuries — a fractured skull and crushed jaw. His condition was termed serious.

O. B. Hodnett Given FHA Appointment

Appointment of Oscar B. Hodnett to a three-year term on the Farmers Home Administration county committee for Hempstead county was announced today by J. V. Hightfill, state director.

Mr. Hodnett succeeds Earl N. Martindale, whose term expired June 30. Also on the committee are James Otis Johnson, Sr., of Columbus and A. R. Avery of Rt. 3, Prescott. A committee of three serves in each agricultural county throughout the nation in which the agency makes farm ownership and operating loans. Appointments are scheduled so that a committee always has two experienced members.

The Hempstead county committee has an important place in making operating credit available to local farmers, according to W. M. Sparks, county supervisor.

Before any money can be borrowed through the agency an applicant must have the approval of the county committee. In the case of farm ownership loans, the farm to be purchased, enlarged or improved must also be approved by the committee. "The members know agricultural conditions in the county, are often familiar with the farm the applicant plans to operate," Mr. Sparks explained.

In addition to approving loans, the committee cooperates with the county supervisor in overall administration of the program in the county. Periodically they review the progress of the program to determine whether they have reached a financial position that would enable them to refinance their loans through private lenders. A farmer who is eligible for credit from Philadelphia, July 14—The harrowing convention of the Democratic party proceeds in an atmosphere of oriental ceremony with the priests and nobles of the weird consistency all bowing in lavish etiquette impatient for the final rite. The surveys telegraphed from here describing the fatal gale in purple hues of spiritual depression are unreliable and should be ignored. There is an exalted fanaticism in the conduct of Frank Hague, of New Jersey, for example, which suggests the illicit nature of a Blue Ridge parson inviting a cop to head to bang him and defying the state police to impair his religious freedom. Mr. Hague turned against President Truman in a heresy that made Jim Farley blink his eyes and murmur piously. But Mr. Hague was enjoying political freedom for the first time since 1932. If it pleased him to make certain more sure in revenge against the Hyde Park haunt, who had any right to say that he was bad about it? On the contrary, he was erect and truculent as of old and probably never had felt happier since 1933.

Hague and Ed Kelly, of Chicago, plainly are what they are, bosses of urban machines often described as sordid by Roosevelt's long-worded hacks from Harvard and the Kremlin. But he never failed to call on them for pluralities, nor failed they ever to deliver. On one occasion, he made them both drop everything and take themselves to Hyde Park where he rubbed their noses in humiliation by eating them obscurely but with monitors to check their presence while the library in his honor was consecrated to this living model for the pure in heart. Let Farley enjoy the disaster however he might, Hague and Kelly were having one last fling as bosses, mucking the wretched little fellow who had had the misfortune to inherit the regime and the blame, and plucking bricks from the ruins to throw at the New Dealers.

Mr. Farley sat in 701 in the Bellevue-Stratford, a corner room, his nude scalp gleaming, and it would be a presumption to say that he was sad. For one thing, he had seen this coming a long time and the wreck of the Roosevelt machine which Jim had built and had oiled and tended with such pride for the first eight years was too plain to be denied. This his knack of prophecy was vindicated again, and furthermore it was a matter for rejoicing to him that the Roosevelt boys and their mother, Harold Ickes, Leon Henderson, Wilson Wyatt, Chester Bowles and, above all, Henry Wallace, would now be buried in the same wreck with the just.

Laurence Steinhardt, the roving ambassador, just home from the seamy side of the iron curtain and weary from forty hours of travel, called on Mr. Farley and may have been depressed by other matters than the shabby carnival in Philadelphia. He had gone for and seen many horrors done by the breed whom Roosevelt had hailed as brothers in democracy and peace-futurism. Mr. Farley seemed to be playing out his hand according to the conventional idea of political regularity. He did not criticize Brother Hague aloud, but what else was implied by his own decision to stick to the party's president in a hopeless year?

Even in the city of New York, the Democrats were at one another as savagely as any Republican could wish. It was a riot, a magnificent disruption, and only now, at long last, were the regulars and interlopers mutually free to rejoice in hateful contemplation of the anguish of unworthy comrades. It had been an unnatural and indecent cohabitation and bound to end in public scenes some day.

It is a note of rebuttal to the story of a gloomy Congress to say that John O'Donnell, the Washington journalist of the New York news, long of ill and puny, had shucked twenty years and gained ten pounds in a week and was rejoicing all over the Bellevue inn-keeping. Roosevelt had done him particular dirt on several occasions. He intervened in a court litigation once to do Mr. O'Donnell out of justice and again he placed in the hand of an unsuspecting colleague of O'Donnell, at the close of a press conference, a German iron cross, requesting him to hand it to O'Donnell. So Mr. O'D. has hated Roosevelt and his memory with a glorious and ever-mourning fervor.

And when he was spared to see the whole disaster, this one man's for alone was enough to redeem the week, if that were needed.

The rebels from the Deep South yipped and shook ranged showers from their brows and backs as they denounced Mr. Truman's civil rights program. But all they could do by way of protest and defense of the sacred rights of the several states and the aloofness of the Southern whites was to nail down Mr. Truman's defeat in November.

That meant, of course, the election of Tom Dewey. But Mr. Dewey's hostility to the ancient privacy so long guaranteed the colored folks down South was even more wicked than Truman's. The only escape thereafter would be a policy of non-enforcement like that which made prohibition downright pleasant and often profitable. It were better then that a Republican should take the blame for such monstrous evasion of a painful issue. Of a naturally quarrelsome nature, the Deep South rebels seemed to be having a wonderful time in their own wild way.

The attendance was a stately off by contrast with the Republican reunion three weeks earlier, but notwithstanding the Democrats' habit of parsing one vote into compound fractions to accommodate more of them on the convention floor. Perhaps there were fewer lobbyists around, a knowing breed who realize that their business will have to be had by Democratic night and the waiters in the great hotels, some recruited from garbage scoops and from hobo jungles under the viaducts, were standing around serenading themselves in quiet scenes of grandeur.

The conduct of the Democratic platform committee, in selecting a special few to compose the holy charter and of hiding them away to do it in stealth, had caused some pincer. One statesman from New York invoked the great spirit of the vanished leader to rebuke perfidy. He was anxious lest the American voters be denied a chance to vote for a party pledged to underwrite the economic and military security of the new state of Israel. On this point, Mr. Farley, who had taken no part in the worry over the platform, put in for a plank promising an end to the partition of Ireland and with a bow to Harlem, of Haiti and Santo Domingo.

As Senator Barkley brayed on and on in his review of the sordid past of the Republicans, the old standard Democrats paid him the compliment of a weary silence. It was an hour of contemplation for party veterans who had to recall how long and strenuously Barkley had worked for low pay and always questionable honors. Once, to his honor, he had lost his temper at Roosevelt when the late leader insulted him and his leadership in rejecting a Democratic tax bill. But after this one and only show of manhood under the yoke, he had subsided into bovine docility and carried on. In Farley's room there was open talk of rewarding him with the vice presidency now that even so dubious a Democrat as Justice William O. Douglas had refused to touch it with tongs.

these principles that should be dear to true Americans than life itself.

"The platform of the national Democratic party makes it impossible for States' Rights Democrats to go along with the present leadership of the party and President Truman's nomination, forces an unwilling convention, makes it necessary for States' Rights Democrats to see that the electoral votes of their states are kept in the electoral college for a man who stands for states' rights and who opposes Harry S. Truman, all he stands for and the new platform of the national party."

Thus history seemed to be flashing back 88 years to another bitter party split over the race issue; a split that put Abraham Lincoln into the White House as the nation's first Republican president. But in a pre-dawn challenge to his Dixie and GOP foes alike President Truman raised the civil rights issue high into the pre-election campaign.

The chief executive climaxed his acceptance of the presidential nomination with a call for Congress to reassemble 11 days hence—to act, among other things, on his and Republican calls for greater civil rights for Negroes and other minority groups.

Mr. Truman has asked for federal anti-lynch, anti-poll tax, anti-Jim Crow and anti-job discrimination laws.

It was the Democratic convention's action in writing those specific proposals into the party's 1948 platform that brought the call for Saturday's rebel conference in Birmingham.

First the convention turned down by a 325 to 309 vote, Dixie's own states' rights plank which would have pledged the party to leave the problem of civil rights to each state.

Then, by a 651 1-2 to 582 1-2 vote, the delegates wrote their complete endorsement of Mr. Truman's own program into the platform that had been the subject of a week-long fight.

The deep south and Texas got very few votes from beyond their borders.

During the debate in the hot, muggy hall, Robert E. Figg of South Carolina shouted to his fellow delegates that they were ousting at "the funeral of the Democratic party."

But the South was hopelessly outvoted.

The walkout didn't come at once, however.

Chairman Sam Rayburn gave the convention into recess before the angry Alabama and Mississippi delegates could gain recognition. When the delegates reassembled for their final session and the call for the states began for presidential nominations, Handy Ellis, chairman of the Alabama delegation, made it official.

He said that because of a pledge to the people of his state not to vote for either a Republican, Harry S. Truman or anyone standing on the kind of platform that had been adopted:

"Thirteen of the delegates and all but three of the alternates will proceed to walk out of this convention and report to the Democratic party of Alabama."

Ellis said he was authorized to say that Mississippi was doing the same.

"I bid you good-bye," he said with a bow.

"Good riddance!" a Wisconsin delegate yelled as the bolters fought their way through packed aisles. "We'll win in November without you!" Ellis roared back. "Harry Truman won't get $5.50 from the white people in Georgia to help his campaign."

I would discuss Oren Harris' record at this time but I have been unable to find any record on him. Whitten declared.

"This is a record of inactivity," he charged. "There is a little crowd of millionaires in El Dorado who are dominating your present congressman and they would willingly spend any amount of money to see him re-elected. They ought to—be done them enough favors."

Tuesday's speech was the second in a series of appearances at county-seat towns over the Seventh Congressional district. Eddy Arnold, famed radio hillbilly singer, and his troupe appeared with Whitten on the program and will accompany the candidate on the rest of his tour. A long-time Calhoun county resident here said it was the largest crowd ever to hear a political speech in Hampton.
